
SUR is covered by the following abstracting and indexing services: IBSS (International Bibliography of the Social Sciences); ISN Zurich (International Relations and Security Network); DOAJ (Directory of Open Access Journals) and SSRN (Social Science Research Network). In addition, SUR is also available at the following commercial databases: EBSCO, HEINonline, ProQuest and Scopus. SUR has been rated A1 and B1, in Colombia and in Brazil (Qualis), respectively.

Semestral
ISSN 1806-6445
Edições em Inglês, Português e Espanhol.
1. Direitos Humanos 2. ONU I. Rede Universitária de Direitos Humanos
Human Rights in Motion

CONTENTS

LUCIA NADER, JUANA KWEITEL, & MARCOS FUCHS

7 Introduction

_PROFILE OF PEDRO PAULO POPPOVIC

11 “We Did not Create Sur Journal Because We Had Certainties, But Because We Were Full of Doubts”

MALAK EL-CHICHINI POPPOVIC
OSCAR VILHENA VIEIRA

17 Reflections On the International Human Rights Movement in the 21st Century: Only the Answers Change

LANGUAGE

SARA BURKE

27 What an Era of Global Protests Says about the Effectiveness of Human Rights as a Language to Achieve Social Change

VINODH JAICHAND

35 After Human Rights Standard Setting, What’s Next?

DAVID PETRASEK

45 Global Trends and the Future of Human Rights Advocacy

SAMUEL MOYN

57 The Future of Human Rights

STEPHEN HOPGOOD

67 Challenges to the Global Human Rights Regime: Are Human Rights Still an Effective Language for Social Change?

EMÍLIO ÁLVAREZ ICAYA

77 Human Rights as an Effective Way to Produce Social Change

INTERVIEW WITH RAQUEL ROLNIK

81 UN Special Procedures System is “Designed to Be Ineffective”

INTERVIEW WITH PAULO SÉRGIO PINHEIRO

91 “Besides Human Rights, I Don’t See a Solution for Serving the Victims”

INTERVIEW WITH KUMI NAIDOO

97 “The Rule of Law Has Consolidated All the Injustices That Existed Before It”

THEMES

JANET LOVE

105 Are we Depoliticising Economic Power?: Wilful Business Irresponsibility and Bureaucratic Response by Human Rights Defenders

PHIL BLOOMER

115 Are Human Rights an Effective Tool for Social Change?: A Perspective on Human Rights and Business

GONZALO BERRÓN

DIEGO LORENTE PÉREZ DE EULATE

133 Issues and Challenges Facing Networks and Organisations Working in Migration and Human Rights in Mesoamerica

GLORIA CAREAGA PÉREZ

143 The Protection of LGBTI Rights: An Uncertain Outlook
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Author/Interviewee</th>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Title</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Arvind Narrain</td>
<td>151</td>
<td>Brazil, India, South Africa: Transformative Constitutions and their Role in LGBT Struggles</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sonia Corrêa</td>
<td>167</td>
<td>Emerging powers: Can it be that sexuality and human rights is a ‘lateral issue’?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Clara Sandoval</td>
<td>181</td>
<td>Transitional Justice and Social Change</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Perspectives</td>
<td>193</td>
<td>Nicole Fritz: Human Rights Litigation in Southern Africa: Not Easily Able to Discount Prevailing Public Opinion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mandira Sharma</td>
<td>201</td>
<td>Making Laws Work: Advocacy Forum’s Experiences in Prevention of Torture in Nepal</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maria Lúcia da Silva</td>
<td>213</td>
<td>Human Rights and Social Change in Angola</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Salvador Nkamate</td>
<td>219</td>
<td>The Struggle for the Recognition of Human Rights in Mozambique: Advances and Setbacks</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Haris Azhar</td>
<td>227</td>
<td>The Human Rights Struggle in Indonesia: International Advances, Domestic Deadlocks</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Han Dongfang</td>
<td>237</td>
<td>A vision of China’s Democratic Future</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana Valéria Araújo</td>
<td>247</td>
<td>Challenges to the Sustainability of the Human Rights Agenda in Brazil</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maggie Beirne</td>
<td>257</td>
<td>Are we Throwing Out the Baby with the Bathwater?: The North-South Dynamic from the Perspective of Human Rights Work in Northern Ireland</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with María-I. Faguaga Iglesias</td>
<td>265</td>
<td>“The Particularities in Cuba Are Not Always Identified Nor Understood By Human Rights Activists From Other Countries”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Voices</td>
<td>273</td>
<td>Fateh Azzam: Why Should We Have to “Represent” Anyone?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>283</td>
<td>Mario Melo: Voices from the Jungle on the Witness Stand of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adrian Gurza Laval</td>
<td>293</td>
<td>NGOs, Human Rights and Representation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Juana Kweitel</td>
<td>305</td>
<td>Experimentation and Innovation in the Accountability of Human Rights Organizations in Latin America</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pedro Abramovay and Heloisa Griggs</td>
<td>323</td>
<td>Democratic Minorities in 21st Century Democracies</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>James Ron, David Crow and Shannon Golden</td>
<td>335</td>
<td>Human Rights Familiarity and Socio-Economic Status: A Four-Country Study</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chris Grove</td>
<td>353</td>
<td>To Build a Global Movement to Make Human Rights and Social Justice a Reality For All</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Mary Lawlor and Andrew Anderson</td>
<td>365</td>
<td>“Role of International Organizations Should Be to Support Local Defenders”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tools</td>
<td>Page</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>----------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>------</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gastón Chillier and Pétalla Brandão Timo</td>
<td>375</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Global Human Rights Movement in the 21st Century: Reflections from the Perspective of a National Human Rights NGO from the South</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Martin Kirk</td>
<td>385</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Systems, Brains and Quiet Places: Thoughts on the Future of Human Rights Campaigning</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rochelle Jones, Sarah Rosenhek and Anna Turley</td>
<td>399</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A ‘Movement Support’ Organization: The Experience of the Association For Women’s Rights in Development (AWID)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana Paula Hernández</td>
<td>411</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Supporting Locally-Rooted Organizations: The Work of the Fund For Global Human Rights in Mexico</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Miguel Pulido Jiménez</td>
<td>419</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Human Rights Activism In Times of Cognitive Saturation: Talking About Tools</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mallika Dutt and Nadia Rasul</td>
<td>427</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Raising Digital Consciousness: An Analysis of the Opportunities and Risks Facing Human Rights Activists in a Digital Age</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sopheap Chak</td>
<td>437</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>New Information and Communication Technologies’ Influence on Activism in Cambodia</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sandra Carvalho and Eduardo Baker</td>
<td>449</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Strategic Litigation Experiences in the Inter-American Human Rights System</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Fernand Alphen</td>
<td>461</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Get Off Your Pedestal”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Mary Kaldor</td>
<td>469</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“NGO’s are not the Same as Civil Society But Some NGOs Can Play the Role of Facilitators”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Louis Bickford</td>
<td>475</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Convergence Towards the Global Middle: “Who Sets the Global Human Rights Agenda and How”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lucía Nader</td>
<td>483</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Solid Organisations in a Liquid World</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kenneth Roth</td>
<td>491</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why We Welcome Human Rights Partnerships</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>César Rodríguez-Garavito</td>
<td>499</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Future of Human Rights: From Gatekeeping to Symbiosis</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dhananjayan Srisankarajah and Mandeep Tiwana</td>
<td>511</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Towards a Multipolar Civil Society</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Emilie M. Hafner-Burton</td>
<td>519</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Avoiding Using Power Would Be Devastating for Human Rights”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Mark Malloch-Brown</td>
<td>525</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“We Are Very Much A Multi-Polar World Now, But Not One Comprised Solely Of Nation States”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Salil Shetty</td>
<td>531</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Human Rights Organisations Should Have a Closer Pulse to the Ground Or How We Missed the Bus</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Interview with Louise Arbour</td>
<td>539</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“North-South solidarity is key”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
INTRODUCTION

HUMAN RIGHTS IN MOTION:
A MAP TO A MOVEMENT’S FUTURE

Lucia Nader (Executive Director, Conectas)
Juana Kweitel (Program Director, Conectas)
Marcos Fuchs (Associate Director, Conectas)

Sur Journal was created ten years ago as a vehicle to deepen and strengthen bonds between academics and activists from the Global South concerned with human rights, in order to magnify their voices and their participation before international organizations and academia. Our main motivation was the fact that, particularly in the Southern hemisphere, academics were working alone and there was very little exchange between researchers from different countries. The journal’s aim has been to provide individuals and organizations working to defend human rights with research, analyses and case studies that combine academic rigor and practical interest. In many ways, these lofty ambitions have been met with success: in the past decade, we have published articles from dozens of countries on issues as diverse as health and access to treatment, transitional justice, regional mechanisms and information and human rights, to name a few. Published in three languages and available online and in print for free, our project also remains unique in terms of geographical reach, critical perspective and its Southern ‘accent’. In honour of the founding editor of this journal, Pedro Paulo Poppovic, the 20th issue opens with a biography (by João Paulo Charleaux) of this sociologist who has been one of the main contributors to this publication’s success.

This past decade has also been, in many ways, a successful one for the human rights movement as a whole. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights has recently turned 60, new international treaties have been adopted and the old but good global and regional monitoring systems are in full operation, despite criticisms regarding their effectiveness and attempts by States to curb their authority. From a strategic perspective, we continue to use, with more or less success, advocacy, litigation and naming-and-shaming as our main tools for change. In addition, we continue to nurture partnerships between what we categorize as local, national and international organizations within our movement.

Nevertheless, the political and geographic coordinates under which the global human rights movement has operated have undergone profound changes. Over the past decade, we have witnessed hundreds of thousands of people take to the streets to protest against social and political injustices. We have also seen emerging powers from the South play an increasingly influential role in the definition of the global human rights agenda. Additionally, the past ten years have seen the rapid growth of social networks as a tool of mobilization and as a privileged forum for sharing political information between users. In other words, the journal is publishing its 20th issue against a backdrop that is very different from that of ten years ago. The protests that recently filled the streets of many countries around the globe, for example, were not organized by traditional social movements nor by unions or human rights NGOs, and people’s grievances, more often than not, were expressed in terms of social justice and not as rights. Does this mean that human rights are no longer seen as an effective language for producing social change? Or that human rights organizations have lost some of their ability to represent wronged citizens? Emerging powers themselves, despite their newly-acquired international influence, have hardly been able – or willing – to assume stances departing greatly from those of “traditional” powers. How and where can human rights organizations advocate for change? Are Southern-based NGOs in a privileged position to do this? Are NGOs from emerging powers also gaining influence in international forums?

It was precisely to reflect upon these and other pressing issues that, for this 20th issue, SUR’s editors decided to enlist the help of over 50 leading human rights activists and academics from 18 countries, from Ecuador to Nepal, from China to the US. We asked them to ponder on what we saw as some of the most urgent and relevant questions facing the global human rights movement today: 1. Who do we represent? 2. How do we combine urgent issues with long-term impacts? 3. Are human rights still an effective language for producing social change? 4. How have new information and communication technologies influenced activism? 5. What are the challenges of working internationally from the South?

The result, which you now hold in your hands, is a roadmap for the global human rights movement in the 21st century – it offers a vantage point from which it is possible to observe where the movement stands today and where it is heading. The first stop is a reflection on these issues by the founding directors of Conectas Human Rights, Oscar Vilhena Vieira and Malak El-Chichini Poppovic. The roadmap then goes on to include interviews and articles, both providing in-depth analyses of human rights issues, as well as notes from the field, more personalized accounts of experiences working with human rights, which we have organized into six categories, although most of them could arguably be allocated to more than one category:

Language. In this section, we have included articles that ponder the question of whether human rights – as a utopia, as norms and as institutions – are still effective for producing social change. Here, the contributions range from analyses on human rights as a language for change (Stephen Hopgood and Paulo Sérgio Pinheiro), empirical research on the use of the language of human rights for articulating grievances in recent mass protests (Sara Burke), to reflections on the standard-setting role and effectiveness of international human rights institutions (Raquel Rolnik, Vinodh Jaichand and Emilio Álvarez Icaza). It also includes studies on the movement’s global trends (David Petrasek), challenges to the movement’s emphasis on protecting the rule of law (Kumi Naidoo), and strategic proposals to better ensure a compromise between utopianism and realism in relation to human rights (Samuel Moyn).

Themes. Here we have included contributions that address specific human rights topics from an original and critical standpoint. Four themes were analysed: economic power and corporate accountability for human rights violations (Phil Bloomer, Janet Love and Gonzalo Berrón); sexual politics and LGBTI rights (Sonia Corrêa, Gloria Careaga Pérez and Arvind Narrain); migration (Diego Lorente Pérez de Eulate); and, finally, transitional justice (Clara Sandoval).

Perspectives. This section encompasses country-specific accounts, mostly field notes from human rights activists on the ground. Those contributions come from places as diverse as Angola (Maria Lúcia da Silveira), Brazil (Ana Valéria Araújo), Cuba (Maria-Ileana Faguaga Iglesias), Indonesia (Haris Azhar), Mozambique (Salvador Nkamate) and Nepal (Mandira Sharma). But they all share a critical perspective on human rights, including for instance a sceptical perspective on the relation between litigation and public opinion in Southern Africa (Nicole Fritz), a provocative view of the democratic future of China and its relation to labour rights (Han Dongfang), and a thoughtful analysis of the North-South duality from Northern Ireland (Maggie Beirne).

Voices. Here the articles go to the core of the question of whom the global human rights movement represents. Adrian Gurza Lavalle and Juana KWéitel take note of the pluralisation of representation and innovative forms of accountability adopted by human rights NGOs. Others study the pressure for more representation or a louder voice in international human rights mechanisms (such as in the Inter-American system, as reported by Mario Melo) and in representative institutions such as national legislatures (as analysed by Pedro Abramovay and Heloísa Griggs). Finally, Chris Grove, as well as James Ron, David Crow and Shannon Golden emphasize, in their contributions, the need for a link between human rights NGOs and grassroots groups, including economically disadvantaged populations. As a counter-argument, Fateh Azzam questions the need of human rights activists to represent anyone, taking issue with the critique of NGOs as being overly dependent on donors. Finally, Mary Lawlor and Andrew Anderson provide an account of a Northern organization’s efforts to attend to the needs of local human rights defenders as they, and only they, define them.

Tools. In this section, the editors included contributions that focus on the instruments used by the global human rights movement to do its work. This includes a debate on the role of technology in promoting change (Mallika Dutt and Nadia Rasul, as well as Sopheap Chak and Miguel Pulido Jiménez) and perspectives on the challenges of human rights campaigning, analysed provocatively by Martin Kirk and Fernand Alphen in their respective contributions. Other articles point to the need of organizations to be more grounded in local contexts, as noted by Ana Paula Hernández in relation to Mexico, by Louis Bickford in what he sees as a convergence towards the global middle, and finally by Rochelle Jones, Sarah Rosenhek and Anna Turley in their movement-support model. In addition, it is noted by Mary Kaldor that NGOs are not the same as civil society, properly understood. Furthermore, litigation and international work are cast in a critical light by Sandra Carvalho and Eduardo Baker in relation to the dilemma between long and short term strategies in the Inter-American system. Finally, Gastón Chillier and Pétalla Brandão Timo analyse South-South cooperation from the viewpoint of a national human rights NGO in Argentina.

Multipolarity. Here, the articles challenge our ways of thinking about power in the multipolar world we currently live in, with contributions from the heads of some of the world’s largest international human rights organizations based in the North (Kenneth Roth and Salil Shetty) and in the South (Lucia Nader, César RODRíGUEz-GARAVITO, Dhananjayan Sriskandarajah and Mandeep Tiwana). This section also debates what multipolarity means in relation to States (Emilie M. Hafner-Burton), international organizations and civil society (Louise Arbour) and businesses (Mark Malloch-Brown).

Conectas hopes this issue will foster debate on the future of the global human rights movement in the 21st century, enabling it to reinvent itself as necessary to offer better protection of human rights on the ground.

Conectas Human Rights is especially grateful for the collaboration of the authors and support of Conectas’ team, in special Laura Daudén, João Brito and Laura Waishich. We would also like to extend our appreciation for the work of Maria Brant and Manoela Miklos for conceiving this Issue and for conducting most of the interviews, and for Thiago Amparo for joining the editorial team and making this Issue possible. Last, but not least, we are also immensely thankful for Luz González’s relentless work editing the contributions received, and for Ana Cernov for coordinating the overall editorial. Thanks to all!
ABSTRACT

Based on our own experience in litigation before the Inter-American System of Human Rights, in this article we argue that the primary strength of the Inter-American Court has been and will continue to be providing a forum where victims can make the moral weight of their words heard. They are the ones who turn from victims into victors when they tell their stories.

Original in Spanish. Translated by Nora Ferm.

Received in February 2014.

KEYWORDS

Inter-American Court of Human Rights – Victims – Human rights defenders – Indigenous peoples

ARTICLE

VOICES FROM THE JUNGLE ON THE WITNESS STAND OF THE INTER-AMERICAN COURTS OF HUMAN RIGHTS

Mario Melo

1 Introduction

Who do we represent? That is one of the fundamental questions that SUR asks in this edition. A question – challenge.. It is something that we human rights defenders from the Global South often fail to ask.

Do we represent, before the high courts of international justice, the voice of mute victims of human rights violations? Do we act, as in reverse ventriloquism, by saying what we would like our clients to say?

Based on personal experience in the proceedings before the Inter-American System of Human Rights, in this article we argue that we haven’t done either one. We have not lent our voice to the victims, because they have their own. We don’t speak for them, but rather with them.

We also maintain that the primary strength of the Inter-American Court has been and will continue to be providing a forum where victims can make the moral weight of their words heard. They are the ones who turn from victims into victors when they tell their stories.

The role of human rights defenders is simply to open up a space so that this can happen, and, at most, to join our voices to those of the victims in order to call for justice.

Rather than call ourselves representatives, we should call ourselves partners.

2 The Inter-American Court and the new voices of human rights

In its 35 years of history, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (hereafter Inter-American Court) has become a regional space where the most pressing issues of American continent reality are discussed from the perspective of rights. Its legal advances have allowed for new developments in human rights theory and practice, and they draw on the contributions made by the parties during litigation.

The Inter-American Commission and the Inter-American Court base their decisions on methods of interpretation that follow the Corpus Iuris of international human rights law, and the legal arguments of the parties, in general, are grounded in frequent references to the standards generated through the jurisprudence of the same Inter-American System and other systems for the protection of rights.

It is no less relevant to point out, however, that the Inter-American Court offers victims of human rights violations on the American continent an opportunity for their cases to be verbally and publicly argued before a court. The hearings allow fresh air to come in where topics that are uncomfortable for societies and states have been guarded. The fact that cases are aired in the presence of the Court and under the gaze of the media and any spectators who wish to follow the hearings either there in the room or through the webcast, which is now a requirement in the Inter-American System of Human Rights, helps to reveal situations that are often otherwise hidden from public scrutiny in order to protect those responsible.

Just the fact that a hearing is held is, by itself, restorative for the victims (BERINSTAIN, 2009).

When the Inter-American Court holds a hearing, it opens up a privileged space where people whose human dignity has been undermined by the violation of their rights, as recognized in the American Convention on Human Rights, can appear before that high court and tell their truth.

For example, a particularly significant moment in the history of the fight for justice for the victims of the dictatorships in the Southern Cone was Macarena Gelman’s declaration before the Inter-American Court, in a hearing held in Quito in November 2010.

She described the circumstances of her birth, which happened while her mother was being held by her oppressors, the suppression of her real identity when she was given by the perpetrators to a new family to be raised as their own daughter. Her encounter as an adult with her grandfather, her continued ignorance of her mother’s whereabouts, and the impacts these have had on different dimensions of her life (Corte Interamericana de Derechos Humanos, Caso Gelman v. Uruguay, 2011).

No less powerful it must have been, years before, in 2004, when the mothers of three children killed in the fire at the “Panchito Lopez” child re-education center in Paraguay spoke at the hearing before the Inter-American Court. With how much pain they must have told the judges who then comprised the Court about the overcrowding and extreme abuse that their children suffered in that institution, until a fire put an end to the ancient building and to the lives of nine children, including their own (Corte Interamericana de Derechos Humanos, Caso Centro de Reeducación del Menor v. Paraguay, 2004).

In every one of the cases that has had a hearing in the Inter-American Court, there must have been people who, with broken hearts, uncovered the recesses of human evil through their testimonies. The voices of the victims, which are, without a doubt, the new voices of human rights on our continent, have been heard by the judges with respect and empathy. Just by doing this, the Inter-American Court has justified its existence before history.

3 The spirits speaking through the mouths of the wise

In July 2011, the author of this article had the privilege, together with Viviana Krsticevick, the Director of Center for Justice and International Law - CEJIL of representing the Kichwa people of Sarayaku, in the Ecuadorian Amazon, in a hearing before the Inter-American Court, as part of a case against the State of Ecuador.

The facts of the case are related to the concession granted by the Ecuadorian state for an oil project that affected 65% of the peoples’ ancestral land. The community of Sarayaku was not informed, consulted, or asked for consent in the granting of this concession.

The presence of the oil company in Sarayaku brought violence, pain, and sacrifice for the people of the village, and the destruction and deterioration of parts of nature that were particularly significant for the worldview and spirituality of their ancestors. Sacred trees were felled, and the very soil of the jungle, across 20 square kilometers, was drilled and planted with explosives in order to conduct seismic explorations in search of oil.

It is hard to imagine a scene less familiar to the daily lives of the indigenous peoples, whose traditional home is the Amazon jungle, and whose culture and worldview set them apart from modern white-mestizo society, than the courtroom of an international tribunal. Nevertheless, a delegation of 20 Sarayaku people, including men, women, youths, the elderly, and a baby born only a few months prior, made it there, overcoming all kinds of difficulties, in order to be there at the key moment when the representatives of the Ecuadorian government would answer for everything the community had suffered.

To reach that point, they had to pursue a seven-year process before the Inter-American Commission of Human Rights, and another year and a half before the Court. But for Sarayaku, awaiting justice was worth the trouble.

In my opinion, the most important moment in the litigation of Pueblo Kichwa de Sarayaku v. Ecuador was when Don Sabino Gualinga, yachak, the spiritual leader of Sarayaku, got up on the witness stand to give his declaration before the Court, with steady steps despite his 92 years of age.

Don Sabino had to testify in order to reveal to the judges something that his people do not like to talk about. Only he could show the court the most painful and disturbing side of the drama that resulted in the unwanted presence of an oil company in their territory. No other type of evidence used in the Court could attest to the deepest dimension of the damage committed against the village: when strangers entered, protected by armed military personnel, to plant in Mother Earth – in 467 places, 12 meters down, and 100 meters apart – a total of 1,433 kilograms of high explosives, in order to set them off in search of oil (CORTE INTERAMERICANA DE DERECHOS HUMANOS, Caso Pueblo Indígena Kichwa de Sarayaku v. Ecuador, 2012, para. 101).
When the witness responded to questions about the impacts of the oil company activities on Sarayaku territory, Don Sabino said that half of the “lords of the jungle were no longer there. Sarayaku is a living land”, he said, it is a living forest. There are trees and medicinal plants and all kinds of beings… Many hid, others died when it burst. They are the ones who maintain the jungle, the woods. If there is too much destruction, the mountains will also collapse … All of those who wish to cause damage, they don’t understand what they are doing. We do understand it, because we see it.2

He also told the story of another yachak, the old man César Vargas, whose tree of power, known as Lispungo, was destroyed by the oil workers:

Mr. Cesar Vargas had his lands in a place called Pingullo, and he lived there with his trees; there, woven like threads was his way of curing. When they felled this Lispungo tree it made him very sad (…) When they cut down that big Lispungo tree that he used as threads, he became very sad, and his wife died, then he died, and a son also died, and after that another son died, and now only two daughters are left.

(The Court weighed his testimony and determined that for the Sarayaku, the company’s destruction of sacred trees, such as the “Lispungo” tree, was a violation of their worldview and cultural beliefs. The damages caused by the oil operation in Sarayaku territory meant that “according to the beliefs of the People, the spirit owners of that sacred place left the site, thereby bringing sterility to the place and the permanent disappearance of the animals from that area, until the spirituality of the place is restored” (CORTE INTERAMERICANA DE DERECHOS HUMANOS, Caso Pueblo Indígena Kichwa de Sarayaku v. Ecuador, 2012, para. 218).

That was not the first time that a witness explained to the Court the impacts that human rights violations have on the spirituality of traditional peoples. For example, in the hearing for Moiwana v. Surinam, witness Erwin Willemdam recounted how community members would be able to return to live in a place once there was justice for the family members who were killed in a massacre.

The community members believe that while those who died at Moiwana are not vindicated, their souls will not be at peace. Furthermore, as long as their bodies do not receive a proper burial, this will bring negative consequences upon the living. The witness is fearful of these angry spirits.

It is not often that those who administer justice in Western judicial systems hear from witnesses who maintain that the damages also include the death or disappearance of spiritual beings, or the angering of the spirits of their ancestors. The judges of the Inter-American Court not only listened, but also tried to understand and gauge the pain that it caused people to feel that the spiritual beings in whom they place their faith and trust to maintain harmony and order have abandoned them, or that the violent, unjust, and unpunished death of their loved ones makes the spirits of their ancestors angry and turns them into a threat. In those cases, the Court considered those elements when declaring the states’ responsibilities for having violated human rights, and when determining reparations.

In the Sarayaku case, the Court recognized the importance that sites of symbolic value have for the cultural identity of the Sarayaku people, and for their worldview, as a collective entity; several of the statements and expert opinions presented during the proceedings indicate the strong bond that exists between the elements of nature and culture, on the one hand, and each member of the people’s sense of being.

(...) The Court considers that the failure to consult the Sarayaku people affected their cultural identity, since there is no doubt that the intervention in and destruction of their cultural heritage entailed a significant lack of respect for their social and cultural identity, their customs, traditions, worldview, and way of life, which naturally caused great concern, sadness, and suffering among them.

4 The Court goes to the jungle

It was a historic moment when, after the public hearing held in 2011, the Inter-American Court decided to go to the village of Sarayaku on April 21, 2012. It delegated its Chief Justice, Diego García Sayán, and Judge Radhis Abreu to go to the community and hear the testimonies of the residents in their own territory. That was the first time that the judges had gone to the homes of victims to talk with them.

The visit was extraordinary. José Gualinga, Tayak Apu (President) of Sarayaku, put things in perspective in his welcoming remarks when he said that his people had been waiting for that day since time immemorial, because when the tayak, or the mythical founders of the community, came down the Bobonaza river to the place where the village sits today, they took ayahuasca and had a vision that one day some wise chiefs would come there to resolve a serious problem facing their people. That is why they founded Sarayaku on that site.

The Court heard the declarations of the residents of Sarayaku, men and women of all ages. For the first time in its history, the highest court of justice in the Americas heard from indigenous victims in their own territory. In doing so, the Inter-American Court took a leap forward in fulfilling the principle of immediacy. There, the Ecuadorian state also acknowledged its responsibility, and the community of Sarayaku held an assembly the same day to determine its response to the judges and to the state, accepting and acknowledging the admission, but asking the Court to issue the expected ruling.

5 The end of a cycle

It requires tremendous effort for a victim to take legal action at the national and international level. The first victory is in filing a complaint, overcoming the feelings of fear, shame, and helplessness that often weigh on those who have suffered acts that cause serious harm to their own human dignity or that of their loved ones. Activities like denouncing the perpetrators before the authorities and following up on the case help the person reconstitute their personality after a violation of their rights.

When there is a group of victims, like in the Sarayaku case, the process of standing up for their rights has helped the members of the group to strengthen social cohesion and hold on to their ethnic identity.

When the oil company personnel and the soldiers came into the jungle between 2002 and 2003 to place explosives, the people of Sarayaku had to face an armed invasion of their territory. To do so, they formed Camps of Peace and Life: small groups of community members, including mothers with small children, who went through the jungle to intercept parties of oil company workers and armed personnel, risking their lives in order to try to prevent them from destroying their land.3

The misery they suffered, the insults, threats, aggressions, and relentless pressure from the oil company and from different state authorities who did not overlook any opportunity to pressure, belittle, and discredit them for their anti-oil position, which was portrayed as being against the “national interest”, undoubtedly left a deep mark on both their individual and collective identities.

The proceedings before the Inter-American judicial system helped Sarayaku to channel the need for recognition and justice in a positive, creative and non-violent manner, thanks to the leadership role assumed by their leaders, and the permanent engagement of their members.

The hearings that were held in the Court headquarters in San Jose, Costa Rica, and in the community of Sarayaku, felt, somehow, like an end point. Pursuing the case for almost a decade without being defeated by the costs, the distances, or the difficulties, felt justified at that moment when the people of the village could tell their truth while looking into the faces of the representatives of the state that could not protect them, and that turned over their sacred lands behind their backs to a company that would turn it into an oil field.

My impression is that the significance of that act, of bringing an end to the cycle through a ritual of saying before the judges what one had carried inside for almost an entire lifetime, is best illustrated through the story of Rumi.

When Rumi’s mother, a leader of the community in 2003, stood up to lead a group of women in the Camps of Peace and Life, Rumi was only eight years old and would walk through the jungle with his hand in hers. Another young man in Sarayaku was an amateur filmmaker studying communication; he managed to document the militarization of his village with a video camera, turning it into the documentary I am the defender of the jungle (SOY DEFENSOR..., 2003), which was used as evidence before the Inter-American Court, and which has also won several international prizes. The documentary ends with an image of a small boy who has the phrase that became the film's title written across his bare chest.

Nine years later, in the Assembly House of Sarayaku, where the Inter-American Court heard the case, a 17-year-old boy was called to the stand. Like most of the boys his age in the community, he was dressed in jeans, a t-shirt, and sneakers. Only his face paint and the llauto or headband that he wore revealed his ethnicity. As he took the five steps from where he was sitting to where he would testify, face to face with the judges, with the state representatives on his left and his community’s lawyers on the right, he paused and before a crowd of photographers, took off his t-shirt and prepared to make his voice heard. Like that, with a bare chest, just like the camera captured him when he was a boy accompanying his mother to defend their territory.

He didn’t say it and didn’t need to, but that virile, ancestral gesture tuned us in to the significance that moment had for him. Without a doubt, that declaration, being able to say what he was thinking and feeling after a young life full of struggle, represented the end of a cycle and an opportunity to move forward.

6 Final reflections

Since the beginning, the Inter-American System of Human Rights has been a meeting place. Judges, commissioners, and lawyers who have been trained in the common law tradition meet and work shoulder-to-shoulder with colleagues who have been trained in the continental European legal tradition.

States and victims meet there, in a difficult, conflictive, but always fruitful dialogue mediated by the bodies of the System, the Commission and the Inter-American Court.

Languages meet there. The legal language of the lawyers and judges comes together with the language of experts from other disciplines—psychologists, anthropologists, doctors, economists, etc... – that help resolve the cases. The languages of activism and of the press are also found there.

But most of all, we find the language of the victims, those who speak firsthand about their pain, their suffering, their cry for justice. The language of those who were tortured, of the family members of the disappeared, of the elderly who unjustly lost their pensions or their jobs, of the indigenous and those from other traditional communities. The language of women and that of men. That of adolescents and that of children. All of them are the languages of human rights.

The richness of this exchange of experiences strengthens the victims by making them feel that they are not alone. Their defenders are there with them, less to represent them than to be their comrades in the struggle.
REFERENCES

Bibliography and Other Sources

Jurisprudence

NOTES

1. To learn more about the presence of the Sarayaku delegation at the Inter-American Court hearing in July 2012, I recommend that you watch the documentary “Children of the Jaguar” (LOS DESCENDIENTES ..., 2012).

2. We recommend that you watch Don Sabino Gualinga’s complete testimony in the video posted by the Inter-American Court. Available at: <http://vimeo.com/26136863>. Last accessed in: Feb. 2014.

Instruments and Allies

Social and Cultural Rights: Courses of Action in Economic, VÍCTOR E. ABRAMOVICH

Who Defines the Public Interest? EDWIN REKOSH

in Brazil the Promotion of Citizen Security FIONA MACAULAY

the Environment Conflict: Addressing Crimes against Human Rights, the Environment and STEVEN FREELAND

Development Implementing the Right to E.S. NWAUCHE AND J.C. NWOBIKE and Lesbians The Right to Recognition for Gays JOSÉ REINALDO DE LIMA LOPES

Rights Education The Right to Education and Human Rights RICHARD PIERRE CLAUDE

Millennium Development Goals Approaches to Implementing the Reflections on Human Rights SALIL SHETTY

for Human Rights Development Goals: Opportunities for Human Rights EMILIO GARCÍA MÉNDEZ

Origin, Concept and Future of Human Rights: Reflections for a New Agenda FLAVIA PIOVESAN

Social, Economic and Cultural Rights and Civil and Political Rights OSCAR VILHENA VIEIRA AND A. SCOTT DUPREE

Reflections on Civil Society and Human Rights JEREMY SARKIN

The Coming of Age of Claims for Reparations for Human Rights Abuses Committed in the South VINO DH JAICHAND

Public Interest Litigation Strategies for Advancing Human Rights in Domestic Systems of Law PAUL CHEVIGNY

Repression in the United States after the September 11 Attack SERGIO VIEIRA DE MELLO

Only Member States Can Make the UN WorkFive Questions for the Right to Education Field SUR 1, v. 1, n. 1, Jun. 2004

EMILIO GARCÍA MÉNDEZ

SALIL SHETTY

FATEH AZZAM

RICHARD PIERRE CLAUDE

JOSÉ REINALDO DE LIMA LOPES

E.S. NWAUCHE AND J.C. NWOBIAKE

STEVEN FREELAND

FIONA MACAULAY

EDWIN REKOSH

VÍCTOR E. ABRAMOVICH

SUR 2, v. 2, n. 2, Jun. 2005

CAROLINE DOMMEN

CARLOS M. CORREA

BERNARDO SORJ

ALBERTO BOVINO

MARIO HORN

NLERUM S. OKOGBULE

MARÍA JOSÉ GUEMBE

JOSE RICARDO CUNHA

LOUISE ARBOUR

SUR 4, v. 3, n. 4, Jun. 2006

SUR 5, v. 3, n. 5, Dec. 2006

CARLOS VILLAN DURAN

PAULINA VEGA GONZÁLEZ

OSWALDO RUIZ CHIRIBOGA

LYDIAH KEMUNTO BOSIRE

DEVIKA PRASAD

IGNACIO CANO

LYNDA C. PAUTASSI

OSWALDO RUIZ CHIRIBOGA

OSWALDO RUIZ CHIRIBOGA

SUR 6, v. 4, n. 6, Jun. 2007

UPENDRA BAXI

OSCAR VILHENA VIEIRA

RODRIGO UPRIMNY YEPES

LAURA C. PAUTASSI

GERT JONKER AND RIKA SWANZEN

CLÓVIS ROBERTO ZIMMERMANN

CHRISTOF HEYNS, DAVID PADILLA AND LEO ZWAAK

BOOK REVIEW

BOOK REVIEW

545-549 (2014) 545
PREVIOUS NUMBERS

Previous numbers are available at <www.surjournal.org>.

SERGIO BRANCO
Brazilian copyright law and how it restricts the efficiency of the human right to education

THOMAS W. POGGE
Eradicating systemic poverty: brief for a Global Resources Dividend

SUR 7, v. 4, n. 7, Dec. 2007

LUCIA NADER
The role of NGOs in the UN Human Rights Council

CÉCILIA MACDOWELL SANTOS
Transnational legal activism and the State: reflections on cases against Brazil in the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights

TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE

TARA URS
Imagining locally-motivated accountability for mass atrocities: voices from Cambodia

CECILY ROSE AND FRANCIS M. SSEKANDI
The pursuit of transitional justice and African traditional values: a clash of civilizations – The case of Uganda

RAMONA VIJAYARASA
Facing Australia’s history: truth and reconciliation for the stolen generations

ELIZABETH SALMÓN G.
The long road in the fight against poverty and its promising encounter with human rights

INTERVIEW WITH JUAN MÉNDEZ
By Glenda Mezarobba

SUR 8, v. 5, n. 8, Jun. 2008

MARTÍN ABREGÚ
Human rights for all: from the struggle against authoritarianism to the construction of an all-inclusive democracy - A view from the Southern Cone and Andean region

AMITA DHANDA
Constructing a new human rights lexicon: Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

LAURA DAVIS MATTAR
Legal recognition of sexual rights – a comparative analysis with reproductive rights

JAMES L. CAVALLARO AND STEPHANIE ERIN BREWER
The virtue of following: the role of Inter-American litigation in campaigns for social justice

RIGHT TO HEALTH AND ACCESS TO MEDICAMENTS

PAUL HUNT AND RAJAT KHOSLA
The human right to medicines

THOMAS POGGE
Medicines for the world: boosting innovation without obstructing free access

JORGE CONTESSE AND DOMINGO LOVERA PARMO
Access to medical treatment for people living with HIV/AIDS: success without victory in Chile

GABRIELA COSTA CHAVES, MARCELA FOGAÇA VIEIRA AND RENATA REIS
Access to medicines and intellectual property in Brazil: reflections and strategies of civil society

SUR 9, v. 5, n. 9, Dec. 2008

BARBORA BUKOVSKÁ
Perpetrating good: unintended consequences of international human rights advocacy

JEREMY SARKIN
Prisons in Africa: an evaluation from a human rights perspective

REBECCA SAUNDERS
Lost in translation: expressions of human suffering, the language of human rights, and the South African Truth and Reconciliation Commission

SIXTY YEARS OF THE UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

PAULO SÉRGIO PINHEIRO
Sixty years after the Universal Declaration: navigating the contradictions

FERNANDA DOZ COSTA
Poverty and human rights from rhetoric to legal obligations: a critical account of conceptual frameworks

EITAN FELNER
A new frontier in economic and social rights advocacy? Turning quantitative data into a tool for human rights accountability

KATHERINE SHORT
From Commission to Council: has the United Nations succeeded in creating a credible human rights body?

ANTHONY ROMERO
Interview with Anthony Romero, Executive Director of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU)

SUR 10, v. 6, n. 10, Jun. 2009

ANUJ BHUWANIA

DANIELA DE VITO, AISHA GILL AND DAMIEN SH-ORT
Rape characterised as genocide

CHRISTIAN COURTIS
Notes on the implementation by Latin American courts of the ILO Convention 169 on indigenous peoples

BENYAM D. MEZMUR
Intercountry adoption as a measure of last resort in Africa: Advancing the rights of a child rather than a right to a child

HUMAN RIGHTS OF PEOPLE ON THE MOVE: MIGRANTS AND REFUGEES

KATHARINE DERDERIAN AND LIESBETH SCHOCKAERT
Responding to “mixed” migration flows: A humanitarian perspective

JUAN CARLOS MURILLO
The legitimate security interests of the State and international refugee protection

MANUELA TRINDADE VIANA
International cooperation and internal displacement in Colombia: Facing the challenges of the largest humanitarian crisis in South America

JOSEPH AMON AND KATHERINE TODRYS
Access to antiretroviral treatment for migrant populations in the Global South

PABLO CERIANI CERNADES
European migration control in the African territory: The omission of the extraterritorial character of human rights obligations

SUR 11, v. 6, n. 11, Dec. 2009

VÍCTOR ABRAMOVICH
From Massive Violations to Structural Patterns: New Approaches and Classic Tensions in the Inter-American Human Rights System

VIVIANA BOHÓRQUEZ MONSALVE AND JAVIER AGUIRRE ROMÁN
Tensions of Human Dignity: Conceptualization and Application to International Human Rights Law

DEBORA DINIZ, LÍVIA BARBOSA AND WEDERSON RUFINO DOS SANTOS
Disability, Human Rights and Justice

JULIETA LEMAITRE RIPOLL
Love in the Time of Cholera: LGBT Rights in Colombia

ECOLOGICAL, SOCIAL AND CULTURAL RIGHTS

MALCOLM LANGFORD
Domestic Adjudication and Economic, Social and Cultural Rights: A Socio-Legal Review
IMPLEMENTATION AT THE NATIONAL LEVEL OF THE DECISIONS OF THE REGIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS SYSTEMS
MARIA ISSAEVA, IRINA SERGEEVA AND MARIA SUCHKOVA
Enforcement of the Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights in Russia: Recent Developments and Current Challenges

CÁSSIA MARIA ROSATO AND LUDMILA CERQUEIRA CORREIA
The Damião Ximenes Lopes Case: Changes and Challenges Following the First Ruling Against Brazil in the Inter-American Court of Human Rights

DAMIÂN A. GONZÁLEZ-SALZBERG
The Implementation of Decisions from the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in Argentina: An Analysis of the Jurisprudential Swings of the Supreme Court

MARCIA NINA BERNARDES
Inter-American Human Rights System as a Transnational Public Sphere: Legal and Political Aspects of the Implementation of International Decisions

SPECIAL ISSUE: CONECTAS HUMAN RIGHTS - 10 YEARS
The Making of an International Organization from/in the South

PATRICIO GALELLA AND CARLOS ESPOSITO
Extraordinary Renditions in the Fight Against Terrorism. Forced Disappearances?

BRIDGET CONLEY-ZILKIC
A Challenge to Those Working in the Field of Genocide Prevention and Response

MARTA RODRIGUEZ DE ASSIS MACHADO, JOSÉ RODRIGO RODRIGUEZ, FLAVIO MARQUES PROL, GABRIELA JUSTINO DA SILVA, MARINA ZANATA GANZAROLLI AND RENATA DO VALE ELIAS
Law Enforcement at Issue: Constitutionality of Maria da Penha Law in Brazilian Courts

SIMON M. WELDEHAIMANOT
The ACHPR in the Case of Southern Cameroons

ANDRÉ LUIZ SICILIANO
The Role of the Universalization of Human Rights and Migration in the Formation of a New Global Governance

CITIZEN SECURITY AND HUMAN RIGHTS
GINO COSTA
Citizen Security and Transnational Organized Crime in the Americas: Current Situation and Challenges in the Inter-American Arena

MANUEL TUFRO
Civic Participation, Democratic Security and Conflict Between Political Cultures. First Notes on an Experiment in the City of Buenos Aires

CELTS
The Current Agenda of Security and Human Rights in Argentina. An Analysis by the Center for Legal and Social Studies (CELTS)

PEDRO ABRAMOVAY
Drug policy and The March of Folly Views on the Special Police Units for Neighborhood Pacification (UPPs) in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

SUR 17, v. 9, n. 17, Dec. 2012

DEVELOPMENT AND HUMAN RIGHTS
CÉSAR RODRÍGUEZ GARAVITO, JUANA KWEITEL AND LAURA TRAJBER WAISBICH
Development and Human Rights: Some Ideas on How to Restart the Debate

IRENE BIGLINO, CHRISTOPHE GOLAY AND IVONA TRUSCAN
The Contribution of the UN Special Procedures to the Human Rights and Development Dialogue

LUIS CARLOS BUOB CONCHA
The Right to Water: Understanding its Economic, Social and Cultural Components as Development Factors for Indigenous Communities

ANDREA SCHETTINI
Toward a New Paradigm of Human Rights Protection for Indigenous Peoples: A Critical Analysis of the Parameters Established by the Inter-American Court of Human Rights

SERGES ALAIN DJOYOU KAMGA AND SIYAMBONGA HELEBA
Can Economic Growth Translate into Access to Rights? Challenges Faced by Institutions in South Africa in Ensuring that Growth Leads to Better Living Standards

ALINE ALBUQUERQUE AND DABNEY EVANS
The Right to Health in Brazil: A Study of the Treaty-Reporting System

LINDA DARKWA AND PHILIP ATTUQUAYEFIO
Killing to Protect? Law Guards, State Subordination and Human Rights in Ghana

CRISTINA RÁDÓI
The Ineffective Response of International Organisations Concerning the Militarization of Women’s Lives

CARLA DANTAS
Right of Petition by Individuals within the Global Human Rights Protection System

SUR 18, v. 10, n. 18, Jun. 2013

INFORMATION AND HUMAN RIGHTS
SÉRGIO AMADEU DA SILVEIRA
Aaron Swartz and the Battles for Freedom of Knowledge

ALBERTO J. CERDA SILVA
Internet Freedom is not Enough: Towards an Internet Based on Human Rights

FERNANDA RIBEIRO ROSA
Digital Inclusion as Public Policy: Disputes in the Human Rights Field

LAURA PAUTASSI
Monitoring Access to Information from the Perspective of Human Rights Indicators

JO-MARIE BURT AND CASEY CAGLEY
Access to Information, Access to Justice: The Challenges to Accountability in Peru

MARISA VIEGAS E SILVA
The United Nations Human Rights Council: Six Years On

JÉRÉMIE GILBERT
Land Rights as Human Rights: The Case for a Specific Right to Land

PÉTALLA BRANDÃO TIMO
Development at the Cost of Violations: The Impact of Mega-Projects on Human Rights in Brazil

DANIEL W. LIANG WANG AND OCTAVIO LUIZ MOTTA FERRAZ
Reaching Out to the Needy? Access to Justice and Public Attorneys’ Role in Right to Health Litigation in the City of São Paulo

OBONYE JUNAS
Human Rights, Extradition and the Death Penalty: Reflections on The Stand-Off Between Botswana and South Africa

ANTONIO MOREIRA MAUÉS
Supra-Legality of International Human Rights Treaties and Constitutional Interpretation
FOREIGN POLICY AND HUMAN RIGHTS

DAVID PETRASEK
New Powers, New Approaches?
Human Rights Diplomacy in the 21st Century

ADRIANA ERTHAL ABDENUR AND DANÍLO MARCONDES DE SOUZA NETO
Brazil’s Development Cooperation with Africa: What Role for Democracy and Human Rights

CARLOS CERDA DUEÑAS
Incorporating International Human Rights Standards in the Wake of the 2011 Reform of the Mexican Constitution: Progress and Limitations

ELISA MARA COIMBRA
Inter-American System of Human Rights: Challenges to Compliance with the Court’s Decisions in Brazil

CONOR FOLEY
The Evolving Legitimacy of Humanitarian Interventions

DEISY VENTURA
Public Health and Brazilian Foreign Policy

CAMILA LISSA ASANO
Foreign Policy and Human Rights in Emerging Countries: Insights Based on the Work of an Organization from the Global South

INTERVIEW WITH MAJA DARUWALA (CHRI) AND SUSAN WILDING (CIVICUS)
Emerging Democracies’ Foreign Policy: What Place for Human Rights? A Look at India and South Africa

DAVID KINLEY
Finding Freedom in China: Human Rights in the Political Economy

LAURA BETANCUR RESTREPO
The Promotion and Protection of Human Rights through Legal Clinics and their Relationships with Social Movements: Achievements and Challenges in the Case of Conscientious Objection to Compulsory Military Service in Colombia

ALEXANDRA LOPES DA COSTA
Modern-Day Inquisition: A Report on Criminal Persecution, Exposure of Intimacy and Violation of Rights in Brazil

ANA CRISTINA GONZÁLEZ VÉLEZ AND VIVIANA BOHÓRQUEZ MONSALVE
Case Study on Colombia: Judicial Standards on Abortion to Advance the Agenda of the Cairo Programme of Action